3. Your Character

Any Gender | Early 40s | SUSPECT

Who You Are

The least memorable person at the conference. Management consultant from “Stratton Consulting Group.” You talk in corporate buzzwords — synergy, optimization, stakeholder alignment. Forgettable suit, aggressive blandness. You’re a LinkedIn profile that became a person. Nobody remembers your face. That’s exactly how you trained it.

Your 3 Secrets

1. You’re not a consultant. You’re an undercover IRS/Interpol agent on a joint task force. You’ve been embedded at this conference for six months, posing as a management consulting firm to build cases against everyone in the room.
2. Paloma was your star informant. She was set to testify in a matter of weeks — enough evidence to bring down Gloria’s cartel, Val’s trafficking operation, and half the white-collar criminals at this conference. Her death didn’t just end a life. It destroyed years of investigation and your career.
3. You misspent federal expense money on personal luxuries instead of funding proper witness security for Paloma. If your supervisors find out, your career is over regardless. You carry guilt about whether better security could have saved her.

Your Alibi

You were at the party the whole time. Networking. You can list every person you spoke to and when — Val, then Marco, then Dex, then Pam. Very visible. Multiple witnesses. But your alibi is so thorough it sounds rehearsed. Who actually tracks every minute of their evening? Someone trained to construct an alibi, that’s who. Professional invisibility makes a perfect cover — through misdirection.

Your Connections

- Paloma — Your informant. Quasi-friendship. You feel guilty about her death.
- Val — She hired your fake firm for a hotel audit. She’s an investigation target and doesn’t know it.
- Gloria — Your primary RICO target. Her cartel structure is fully mapped in your files.
- Zane — He suspects you’re law enforcement. He’s been watching you.

Your Props

“Stratton Consulting Group” conference badge and business cards (printed), padfolio/leather folder

4. Round 1 — “The After-Party”

In-game time: 8:00 PM – 10:00 PM

SUNNY PATEL

- Be present but forgettable. Talk corporate buzzwords — “synergy,” “optimization,” “stakeholder alignment.”
 - Take mental notes on everyone. Respond to questions but don’t initiate.
 - Leave conversations early to “observe from the periphery.” Nobody notices you leaving.
 - When the body is found, be controlled. Almost too controlled. Like you’re managing a situation.

STOP — Wait for the host to call “ROUND 2 — 10:00 PM”

5. Round 2 — “Everyone’s a Suspect”

In-game time: 10:00 PM – 11:00 PM

SUNNY PATEL

- Your alibi: “At the party the whole time. I spoke with Val, then Marco, then Dex, then Pam.” List precisely. Too precisely.
 - If anyone asks what you talked about with each person: hesitate for the first time. That hesitation is everything.
 - If Zane looks at you suspiciously, hold eye contact. Don’t flinch.
 - Do NOT reveal you’re a federal agent yet. That’s Round 3.

STOP — Wait for the host to call “ROUND 3 — 11:00 PM”

6. Round 3 — “The Investigation”

In-game time: 11:00 PM – Midnight

SUNNY PATEL

- Reveal yourself. Drop the corporate persona entirely. Stand up.
 - “I’m not a consultant. I’m a federal agent — IRS and Interpol joint task force. Paloma Rathbone was my informant. She was going to testify against every person in this room.”
 - This reframes everything. Paloma wasn’t just killed over personal grudges — her testimony would have brought down entire operations.
 - If asked why you didn’t protect her: look guilty. “I should have. I know that now.”

 STOP — Wait for the host to call “ROUND 4 — Midnight”

7. Round 4 — “The Reveal”

In-game time: Midnight

SUNNY PATEL

- Your case is destroyed. Your informant is dead. But at least you know who did it. Small comfort.
